industry wants to comply or is required to comply, either category, with a federal mandate? How are we going to distinguish? There is nothing compelling about this particular request for exemption, and the road, the road into the future is fraught with difficulties if you choose, if you choose to go down this road.

SENATOR CROSBY: Thank you, Senator Wickersham. Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Madam President, members of the Legislature, there are other bills that are going to be talking about giving money away to others, not loans, but giving money away, and I can imagine what would happen if I said that I come from one of the most depressed districts in this state and I want the Legislature to create a grant program, not where you subsidize loans, not where you say loans are going to be given at a lower than market rate and if certain contingencies come to pass then the loan is forgiven. I couldn't even get a program like that through. Like I say, my bills don't spend money, but you see how I get treated. Then I have to stand right after all of that and see programs where they want to give money away in chunks of $75,000. That's not this bill, it's the next one. And since hardball is what we're playing in this Legislature now, that's the way it's going to be for the rest of the session for me. This bill before us right now though is in a different category because we have people who are in business now making a profit, will continue in business, will continue to make a profit even if they are required to be good citizens and pay their taxes. These bills always remind me of a movie I saw called "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World", and it had people like Spencer Tracy, Jonathan Winters, that guy who plays Columbo, all kind, even some British people, and one guy with a bigger gap between his front teeth than I've got in mine, so I was kind of partial to him, but he was probably one of the nuttiest characters represented. And they were going to try to locate where some stolen money was found and I think they found it, and they were going to find a way to divide it up and you know what happens when greed comes into play. And they didn't want to have to pay taxes on it so they were kind of meeting on the highway and mentioning how nobody is going to say anything, nobody, right? Then Jonathan Winters, he kind of squinted his
